The car was driven by an Olean resident, who was exonerated of all blame.

Good Progress On River Dyke

Work has been progressing at a good rate on the river dike during the past ten days. With milder weather in order since Christmas a great many yards of concrete have been poured and the big wall has steadily gone forward towards its west end.

At one time officials believed work would soon have to cease for the winter as high water in the river appeared a barrier to putting in the last 250 feet of footings. However the soil around the footing piles has been dug out and thrown up in the form of a dam shutting out the flow of the river, and the village pumper is now pumping out the water so it will be possible to pour the rest of the concrete. If the open winter prevails for another six weeks it is believed the section of wall west of Main Street bridge may be completed in that time.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Fascist bombs dropped from insurgent bomber planes placed the lives of U. S. refugees in danger this week. Monday was the first instance of a direct attack upon the neutral zone of Madrid and projectiles struck within 250 yards of the officially abandoned American embassy. British sources stated that 4,000 Italian troops landed at Cadiz, Spain, on New Year's Day, but the ministry at Rome branded the report as "false".

Sixteen persons lost their lives in accidents over the week-end in upstate New York. Twelve were killed by autos.

Robert H. Treman, Ithaca banker of state-wide reputation, died at his home Monday. Mr. Treman was a trustee of Cornell University and past president of New York State Banker's Association.

"Big Ben" timepiece pride of all Londoners played a trick on his public one day recently. The clock the accuracy of which is sworn by all Britishers was found to be a half-hour slow. Investigation revealed a painter inside the clock tower had leaned his ladder on the spindle which turns "Big Ben's" hands, stopping the clock. When the ladder was removed it started again, but the custodian of the big clock was flabbergasted to find it had been fibbing for a short time.

Fire Destroys Headquarters Building in CCC Camp

All Records, Reserve Supplies, Office Equipment and Storeroom Material Burned—Early Morning Blaze Believed Started From Overheated Stove — No One Injured—Official Inquiry Being Made.

Conservation Corps members in the Addison CCC camp will remember their first New Year's day here for they were awakened in the early morning hours of Friday by cries of "fire, fire", for the headquarters building burned to the ground with an estimated loss of $12,000. A complete inventory of all that was burned has not been made yet owing to loss of records in the blaze.

It is not known by camp authorities just what started the early morning fire as most of the corps members were asleep and there was no activity in the building. The company clerk and supply clerk were asleep. There were three small coal stoves in the building and it is believed that sparks from one of the stoves started the fire, that or an overheated stove.

The fire was well underway when it was discovered and camp fire extinguishers were brought into play to try to stop the fire from spreading, but these proved ineffectual. The light timber construction of the buildings proved ready kindling for the fire.

Local fire men were called but could do little when they arrived owing to the fire having been well started and the building nearly demolished when they arrived. The burned building housed the only telephone in the camp and this was quickly put out of commission by the fire.

The headquarters housed all records of the camp commander, finance officer, mess officer, commissary department, engineering department, clerical records of activities, the money of the camp officers and of the men placed in a safe for keeping, tools, office equipment, personal belongings of officers and men, blankets, clothing supplies, cooking equipment, working equipment kept in reserve, supplies of all sorts necessary for a company of 155 men and officers.

Company commander Duncan Monroe was in New York and Lieutenant Angelo Villios was in charge of the camp. His quarters are located across the parade ground from the burning building. He took command of fire fighting activities as soon as he was notified of the danger.

CCC enrollees devoted their time to trying to save nearby barracks buildings, Number One being adjacent to the burned structure. The scorched walls and roof of Number One tell the story of the intense heat and the efforts of the workers.

Lt. Villios, camp finance officer, decided to pay the enrollees off in silver dollars and the fact that these did not burn with the paper money, made the loss much less than was at first supposed. The heat was so intense in the burning building that money, books, records and data kept in an iron safe were burned beyond recognition. Only the silver in the safe was saved.

Motor travel into and around the camp was difficult owing to the mud ruts caused by being constantly turned over.

Enrollees and officers fine-toothcombed the ashes to find personal belongings and salvagable material. Tools, hardware fittings, personal jewelry and other small articles were found in the ashes.

Twisted steel, melted glass, bits of burned clothing, fittings from trunks, suitcases, tool boxes and record cases were all that remained after the fire, which completely destroyed the building and its entire contents.

Captain Brown, acting district inspector, with Lieutenant Pederson, both of Binghamton and both members of the Army Board of Inquiry, were at the camp Friday afternoon making their investigation, interviewing camp officers and men and compiling material for a report on the fire for headquarters.

Camp officers and enrollees would not make statements relative to the fire until after the official board of inquiry had made its report.

Woodlot Improvement To Be Demonstrated At Woodhull and Caton

Farmers of southern Steuben county will gather at the farms of Henry Pock of Caton and Roy Jordan of Woodhull Friday of this week to observe the results of a woodlot improvement demonstration which have been established there.

The demonstration plots, each one quarter of an acre, were laid out by Forester James Pond of Cornell University on November 27. Since that date Messers Pock and Jordan have cut out the weeds and interfering trees marked by Mr. Pond, and those trees that are to be a part of the permanent forest have been left standing.

This plan of selective cutting, long practiced in Europe, has been adopted by American foresters as a means of preserving and improving woodlots, and at the same time harvesting the supply of fuel wood.

Neighbor farmers who have learned of these demonstration plots plan to attend the meetings in considerable numbers. The meeting with Mr. Pock begins at 10:00 and that with Mr. Jordan at 1:30.

William Colgrove was removed to Bath in the A. T. Smith ambulance in Thursday where he was admitted to the hospital for treatment.

DOES ADVERTISING PAY?

Isn't it funny that so many Business men will get up in the morning—shave
With an advertised razor
And advertised soap—
Put on advertised underwear,
Advertised hose, shirt, tie, collar
And advertised shoes.
Seat themselves at a table

And—
Eat advertised breakfast food
Drink advertised coffee or Substitutes,
Put on an advertised hat,
Light an advertised cigar,
Go to their business in an
Advertised automobile,

And—
Turn down an advertising
proposition
On the ground that
Advertising doesn't pay!

WE WONDER!

SCIENCE AND FAITH

The history of medicine contains many thrilling tales of discovery. Men have risked their lives and even paid the supreme penalty to learn the truths about disease and the cures. Sometimes a malady which puzzled peoples of a former century most baffingly has been solved in a simple manner with benefit to millions.

One of the dreaded epidemics of the Middle Ages was Ergotism. It was common throughout Central Europe and for some reason, mysterious to the doctors of that period became quite prevalent following moist summers or during famines. A chronicle of 1085 A. D. contained the following comment on Ergotism: "The disease takes two forms . . . Many were tortured and twisted by contraction of the nerves; others died miserably, their limbs being eaten by the holy fire and blackened like charcoal."

Ergotism was recognized even then as a poor man's disease, but no one dreamed that diet was responsible for it. Often the term "St. Anthony's Fire" was applied to the disease in France and sufferers were apparently miraculously cured at the Abbey of St. Anthony; cures really provided by the use of ergot-free food by those who visited the Abbey.

Now it has been proved that the disease was caused by black grains of rye. The poor peasant thought he could not afford to throw away these black grains, and especially in times of famine he ate them to his death. The wealthier class had the black grains removed from the rye going into their bread and was not afflicted by the disease. The black grains have been proved not to be really diseased rye, but the resting place for a fungus, ergot, which sporulates in the spring and is carried to rye flowers where it germinates. Since warm weather favors ergot growth, like growth of blight spores, the disease was more prevalent after a moist season. The two types of disease were the gangrenous type and the convulsive.

Dr. George Fiero, of the University of Buffalo, who has made a study of this ancient disease says that Ergotism is by no means extinct. There was an epidemic in Russia in 1926 in which more than 11,000 cases were reported. Ergot on the rye of this country is not uncommon, but our milling methods practically eliminate it from American made bread, so we have no epidemics of Ergotism.

It is little wonder that the people of the Middle Ages were highly superstitious. With their limited knowledge diseases were often regarded as the work of evil spirits, when the simplest measures of prevention could have prevailed against them. They sought, vainly for the most part, for some form of miraculous cure and in the case of Ergotism believed implicitly that power was held in the Abbey of St. Anthony.

And as far as that goes they had reason to believe. Did they not know of people who went to the Abbey afflicted by Ergotism, who came away cured? Those suffering from the disease had faith to believe if they visited this shrine, they too could be cured. And who can say this was not a miracle, even though we know the diet these refugees received at the Abbey affected their cure? Did not every miracle Jesus performed require that the recipient obey some command demanding action?

We believe in miracles today. But we believe that miracles of healing are best accomplished with the aid of the most skilled medical help available. Science has been allied with man, and now every person has faith to believe his chances of escaping plagues and epidemics is immeasurably better than during the Middle Ages. Yet our faith in the efficacy of drugs should not cloud our faith for the Supreme Being behind the drugs and behind all our knowledge of the application of the science of healing.

ELECTORAL COLLEGE REFORM

The last national election has again forcibly brought to notice the frequent disparity between the electoral votes received by presidential candidates and the popular vote they poll. Surprising as it may seem there have been nine Presidents elected by a minority of the popular vote during the last 80 years, for the electoral vote seldom reflects proportionally the real expression of the voters at the polls of the entire nation.

Two recent elections show how poorly the electoral college represents the majority and minority voices of the total number of voters. In 1928 Herbert Hoover won by an overwhelming majority of the electoral votes—nearly ninety per cent. Yet he polled a trifle less than sixty per cent of the popular vote of the country. This discrepancy is shown all the more clearly by the fact that every electoral vote Mr. Hoover received represented 48,180 popular votes, while every electoral vote Al Smith received represented 172,602 popular votes. This comparison fades to insignificance when it is found that in the last election each Roosevelt electoral vote represented 52,679 popular votes, while each Landon electoral vote represent 2,085,239 popular votes.

In other words each electoral vote Landon received represented nearly forty times as many popular votes as each electoral vote Roosevelt received. If the 1936 electoral vote accurately reflected the national popular vote without respect to state lines Roosevelt would have received 323 electoral votes and Landon 194. Lemke would have received 10, Norman Thomas two and Earl Browder one.

The unparalleled disparity between the popular vote and the electoral vote in 1936 has given rise to a new protest against this system. Senator Norris of Nebraska who sponsored the "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution, is among the proponents of electoral college reform. Representative Lea of California believes the electoral vote in each state should be apportioned according to the popular vote.

Possibly no amendment will be submitted during this administration, but the time is probably not far off when it will come. For too long have the citizens of certain sections of the country been to all effects disfranchised by this system. A Republican vote for a president cast in Georgia, is not a vote at all. But if our chief executives were elected by popular vote, those disfranchised voters would have an opportunity of letting their voices be heard.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT AND NEGLECT

Recently the local library was emblazoned with a large sign reading PUBLIC LIBRARY. Standing out in bold, white letters on the north side of the building it plainly marks the spot for anyone who will read. It is to be assumed the trustees of the library placed the sign for the convenience of the public, a laudable move if they had affixed the complete name instead of only a part.

Quite a few years ago this building was used for a Y. M. C. A., being held in trust by the trustees of the Addison Y. M. C. A. The building was financed by the Gillet-Winton family, the members of which were aware that institutions change with the march of time. Hence there was a proviso that when the building ceased to be used for the purpose intended, it should become the property of the Addison Presbyterian Church. Now the Presbyterian Church had no use for the building when the Y. M. C. A. ceased to function in Addison, so an arrangement was made with the Winton family to turn the building over to the Addison Library Association for use as a public library. There were no strings to the gift, except one little, trivial matter easy to be carried out; the building was to be named the Gillet Library Building.

When the library took possession the name was temporarily affixed to the front window with letters glued on the glass. Soon the action of moisture and frost removed these letters one by one, and within about a year from the time this fine building became the property of the local library there was nothing to show how it was acquired. Some more years have now rolled by and it is doubtful if there are now 100 people in the village of Addison who remember this building should be rightly called the Gillet Library Building.

Of course the trustees of the Addison Public Library have not intended the Gillet name be lost through their neglect, yet the effect is the same. It is a shame to the people of this community and should be corrected.

Another instance might be cited. Some years ago following the death of George I. True, a public spirited Addison citizen, Miss Jessica Turner provided funds which largely paid for a much-needed school gymnasium. The gift was contingent on the building being called the True Gymnasium Building. The name was not indelibly erected on the building at the time, as it should have been, and to this day there is no visible recognition of this gift.

These two instances may not seem to mean much to the average citizen who walks through the streets of our village each day. Yet, they may mean more to the future of the community than anyone could guess. Where is there a person who would care to leave one cent of inheritance to the people of this village for public benefit, as a memorial, when we are too slothful to publicly display the names of our former benefactors?

Resistance to Decrease in Relief Puts Problem Up to Roosevelt

By MARK SULLIVAN

RECENT developments about W. P. A. begin with an attempt made to reduce the number on the rolls and thereby the expenditures. Following the election, President Roosevelt, taking account of increased business activity, instructed W. P. A. Administrator Harry Hopkins to reduce materially the number of persons on his rolls. Mr. Hopkins acted. Throughout the country about 150,000 were taken off by December 5.

At once resistance arose. Several mayors, including Mr. LaGuardia, of New York, said in effect that persons dismissed from the Federal W. P. A. would become charges on the cities. Some mayors said the cities did not have the necessary funds. Whether they had or not, the mayors were fairly certain to make outcry. In any city, money paid out by the Federal W. P. A. is looked upon as an advantage. The point of view of the mayors is the same as that of many local officials, some local chambers of commerce and some local newspapers. To want as much money as they can get from the Federal government—whether it be relief money, soldiers' bonus, appropriations for new postoffices or what not—has become a common trait of local communities, politicians and others.

So, added to the outcry from mayors came protests from members of Congress. They share and reflect the common attitude which says the more money a community can get from the Federal government the better. One Senator, Mr. Thomas, of Oklahoma, called a meeting of Mid-Western Senators to oppose reduction in relief rolls in their states.

Further protest came from representatives and spokesmen of groups on relief. A number of fairly important artists and authors, not themselves on relief, united in an open letter to the President, taking the ground that no artist or author must be removed from the relief rolls so long as he wishes to remain on. Indeed, they took the position that the Federal government must never retire from payments to artists—that subsidy to artists, such as now practiced for relief purposes, must be a permanent public policy.

Further and vigorous protest, in some cases taking the form of violence, came from groups of beneficiaries of relief. There were "sit-down" strikes of W. P. A. workers about to be dismissed, sympathetic "sit-down" strikes of their associates. There were demonstrations by groups of smaller public officials administering relief. Some of them demanded not merely no reduction but actual increase. It is announced that W. P. A. workers and sympathizers will conduct an organized march on Washington, to arrive January 15. This movement is under the sponsorship of persons who, during the last year, led movements which took physical possession of the capitol buildings in the state capitals of Wisconsin, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Meantime, in Washington, President Roosevelt said he would ask Congress for $500,000,000 to care for the five months from February 1 to July 1. This would be at the rate of $100,000,000 a month. This is a material reduction from the present pace of expenditure.

Upon Mr. Roosevelt's announcement, W. P. A. Administrator Harry Hopkins said $750,000,000 would be needed. Mr. Roosevelt softened his earlier announcement by saying that amounts additional to the $500,000,000 would be found here and there among unused balances of appropriations for various purposes. President Roosevelt and Administrator Hopkins conferred. Afterward Mr. Hopkins was quoted as saying that "from my point of view we never have enough to take care of the unemployed."

This about brings the situation up to date. It is apparent that through relief there have been set up several vested interests. The groups who think they have vested claims on the Treasury include those on relief, friends and relatives of those on relief, mayors of cities and officials of communities into which relief money comes, Congressmen who get credit for bringing government money into their districts, the small government officials who have jobs administering relief which they would lose if relief is reduced.

What happens now? It is clear business has improved to a point where there cannot now be as much need for relief. President Roosevelt wishes to reduce relief expenditures. If he wants to hard enough he can probably do so. But he will need to be more firm than he was, for example, about the soldiers' bonus. Though most Congressmen like to get Federal money for their districts, they like also, under present conditions, to support the President. If Mr. Roosevelt asserts his policy of reduction strongly enough, if he appeals for public support, he will get the public support and also support from Congress. Most of the Democratic leaders in Congress agree with the President. Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, says the amount appropriated should be even less than the $500,000,000 Mr. Roosevelt proposes.

Effective Neutrality

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Senator Vandenberg, like most of us, would be glad to find a policy that is automatic, foolproof and guaranteed to keep the United States out of another great war. I wish I could believe that such a policy can be invented. For it is plain enough that if a European war breaks out, it will be so devastating that for generations to come Europe will be living in another Dark Age. In view of that prospect the highest obligation of this country is to see that this hemisphere remains at peace, providing a sanctuary for the heritage of civilization.

But if we are to succeed in that purpose, we must not begin by flattering ourselves that it can be accomplished by the simple and easy device of passing some new statutes. To remain at peace while the world is at war will require much more than a few laws prohibiting this and that. It will require continual action that is vigilant, resourceful, resolute. It is for action of that kind that we ought to be preparing ourselves, never allowing ourselves to fall into the comfortable delusion that when we have passed some laws we shall have made ourselves secure.

It is, I think, easy enough to demonstrate that no workable statute of the kind Senator Vandenberg wants can possibly be devised now. He would like a statute which definitely prohibits certain kinds of trade and intercourse with nations that are at war. The task of defining now, in advance, how much of each commodity we would be willing to sell to each possible belligerent in two groups of allies is beyond the wit of man. Suppose, for example, that Britain, France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Turkey and Russia are allies. Can any statute be written this winter which says what the quota of each commodity to each of these nations would be? Can it say also whether Turkey and Czechoslovakia may assign their quotas to Britain and France, or vice versa?

So it would be easier to prohibit all trade with all belligerents. At least it would seem easier. But neutral experience shows clearly that that would be no solution. For there are always the other neutrals. Are we also going to prohibit all trade with other neutrals, or are we going to put the other neutrals on a quota? Are we to refuse to trade with Holland, Sweden and Switzerland, or do we also put them on rations? And if Japan is neutral, do we prohibit trade with Japan if neutral Japan begins to buy our goods on a large scale for sale to neutral Holland which re-sells them to a belligerent?

The theory of the "quarantine" is, I am convinced, based on a failure to grasp the complexity of international trade in the modern world and on a mis-reading of our experience in the last war. Senator Vandenberg, after his service on the Nye Committee, has joined those who believe that we were drawn into the Great War because of our huge war trade with the Allies. Though I think there are good reasons—moral, social and economic—for not permitting such a great war trade financed by credit and loans to develop again, I do not believe that it was the war trade which brought us into the war.

I believe we were drawn in because our own military power was negligible and because the German General Staff made the miscalculation of thinking that we would not and could not develop enough military power to play a decisive role. In other words, I believe that Wilson was forced to go to war, not because he failed to follow Bryan's advice, but because he waited too long before he followed Theodore Roosevelt's advice. If he had begun to mobilize after the Lusitania, Germany would not, I believe, have dared to declare unrestricted submarine warfare two years later. It was the two years' demonstration that we were not preparing to fight which made it seem a safe gamble to let the submarines loose in 1917.

I know that this is not the orthodox view today. But none the less I think it is the true view. And from it I draw this moral: that the only effective neutrality is a highly armed neutrality. So it does not seem to me important, or even feasible, to say in advance just what rights we shall renounce, what rights we shall try to uphold. Those questions will have to be determined when we see the practical situation of the war itself. But what can be done in advance is to prepare all the plans for a highly armed neutrality. Then, on the outbreak of a foreign war we shall be in a position to make sure that the belligerents respect the neutral policy we do adopt. For then, as they grow weaker, we shall be growing stronger; as they, in their weakness are tempted to more and more desperate courses of action, it will be more and more dangerous for them to provoke us, because we shall be more and more formidable.

No doubt this is an unpleasant proposal. But let us not deceive ourselves into thinking that in a world war we can remain at peace by the simple device of staying at home and folding our arms. What I am suggesting ought particularly to commend itself to those who, like Senator Nye, wish to cut off all trade with belligerents. For their program means immediately a severe depression in the United States. That depression will have to be met by some kind of public work, and with the world in flames, the only prudent kind of public work would be to develop the military power of the United States.

Thus the proposal that we found our neutrality on a program of military preparedness kills two birds with one stone. It makes our neutrality effective, that is to say likely to be respected. It relieves the depression which would inevitably produce the social discontent in which war fevers are generated.

Finally, and this is no small help in the preservation of peace, it provides useful and patriotic work for those who would otherwise be the leaders and the rank and file of a war party. If Senator Nye remembers 1915 and after, he should realize that the effective propaganda for American intervention came not from the Allies, and not from bankers and munition-makers, but from Theodore Roosevelt, Leonard Wood, and their disciples who

Congress Faces A Double Opportunity

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Since its first session back in 1789, the Congress of the United States has represented to the world the American principle of Government by the People.

Through almost a century and a half it has remained one of the greatest Representative Legislatures on earth.

That is something for its members to remember during the session now in progress.

For the present Congress of the United States faces a double opportunity. It can translate into action the will of the public; and it can continue to prove to the world that Government by the People offers the surest road to the continued well-being of a nation and its individual citizens.

At this time such a demonstration could prove of immense value to both the Old World and the New.

To Europe it could emphasize the significant facts that nations rattle the sabre less violently and men live in greater happiness where Public Opinion, rather than Dictatorship, rules.

At home it could remind us that under the American form of government, authority resides in our elected representatives — not in the hordes of appointed Bureaus and Commissions which through recent years have increasingly expanded in size, in power, and in arrogance.

During past weeks official Washington has strongly indicated an intention to curtail both in numbers and in power our growing army of Bureaucrats.

If the 75th Congress backs up that promise it can win the widespread approval of the country. But this will not end the achievement. It can also take a significant step in strengthening throughout the world the principle of Government by the People — a principle on which our Nation was founded and has risen to greatness.

Farm Conference of Four States Lists 11 Problems of Dairymen

New York, Jan. 2—In a three-day conference in New York this week farm organization representatives of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Vermont agreed that the initial step toward recovery is to lay before producers definite and detailed information about their marketing problems.

To that end the conference appointed a committee to get facts of the problems of farmers, and while that is being done the committee is to conduct a study looking toward a solution so it can make recommendations to dairymen. The committee is composed of representatives of the general farm organizations in each of the four states.

The conference was a result of a movement launched by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, which asked the general farm organizations of the four states to join in a meeting to consider problems of the dairy industry.

W. F. Whittier of Douglassville, Pa., president of the Pennsylvania Dairy Association, was selected by the conference as its permanent chairman. In a statement issued at the close of the conference Wednesday afternoon he said the "number and the complexity of problems involved in the New York Milk Shed are such that no permanent solution of them can be developed until all dairy producers have a fuller understanding of the fundamental causes of these problems".

Eleven primary problems were recognized by the conference as being "urgently in need of solution from the producers' viewpoint". In a preface to the listing of these eleven problems, Mr. Whittier said:

"We must make all dairy producers cognizant of certain underlying causes of their unfavorable economic position before we can hope to obtain united support of the dairymen for any corrective program. We are frank to admit that without united support of producer groups no plan evolved here, or elsewhere, is going to get the support essential to its success."

Mr. Whittier said that in keeping with this conclusion leaders of the various organizations who attended the conference are being asked to make detailed reports to their respective membership.

"These reports" he said, "will include our committee's views as to the most serious of the problems which, in our opinion, should be solved if stability of market and fair returns are to be realized."

The eleven specific problems recognized by the conference are:

1. Lack of unified or joint action by producers and producer groups.
2. Lack of control of prices paid to producers for milk crossing state lines.
3. The increased bargaining power of distributors resulting from producers' necessity to compete for desirable markets.
4. The growing tendency on the part of distributors to relieve themselves of excess milk, over fluid requirements, by closing or transferring of plants and the dropping of producers.
5. The price depressing influence of uncontrolled surplusses.
6. The failure under governmental milk control of prices quickly to reflect changed seasonal conditions and changes in cost of production.
7. The excess seasonal production over fluid milk and cream market requirements.
8. The lack of adequate and thorough audit of dealer classification sales by competent, producer-controlled agencies.
9. Inadequate security to producers for payment of milk delivered.
10. Overlapping and conflicting board of health regulations, and multiple inspection of farms.
11. Insufficient official checking of milk weights and tests.

The committee which is to study these problems and seek recommendations for their solution which can be submitted to farmers consists of three farm organization representatives for each of the three states—New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Vermont has one representative on the committee.

Committeemen for New York are: Raymond Cooper, Oswego; Herbert P. King, Trumansburg, and J. A. Coulter, Watertown, as representatives of the New York State Conference Board of Farm Organizations:

Pennsylvania committeemen and their affiliations are:

E. B. Dorsett, Mansfield. Past Master Pennsylvania State Grange; R. N. Benjamin, Harrisburg, Presiednt, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Federation, and Mr. Whittier as President of the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association.

New Jersey committeemen are:

D. H. Adams, Three Bridges, Master New Jersey State Grange; H. E. Taylor, Trenton, Secretary New Jersey Farm Bureau; Nils Swenson, Hackettstown, New Jersey Dairy Council.

Vermont is represented by Karl S. Fields, North Ferrisburg, of the Vermont State Farm Bureau.

State Planning Council Makes Annual Report to Governor

The annual report to the Governor by the State Planning Council indicates that the administrative head of the Division of State Planning is following punctiliously, the purpose of the legislation creating it.

The primary recommendations of the unofficial State Planning Board, which was replaced by the Council when the Division of State Planning was set up in the Executive Department in the fall of 1935, are in general concurred in by the Council. They call for the enlargement of the public domain through a long-term program of purchasing sub-marginal farm lands and constructing thereon a complete system of regulating reservoirs in upland headwater areas; strengthening legislation for the control of water pollution; broader powers for county planning; state regulation of use and structures along state highways; a more general application of the pay-as-you-go method of making local and state improvements; and changes and adjustments in public services to conform with a declining rate of population growth and the resulting progressive increase in the average age.

The staff work has included the preparation of base and record maps, among them an outline map of the state with county, city and town boundaries brought up to date. Notable was the completion of an atlas of state owned lands never before available nor possible of preparation by a single state department but regarded as of great value to all departments and to members of the legislature desirous of studying the interrelation of lands under various units. In some cases such a complete picture of state ownership may lead to the conservation of state funds by making additional purchases unnecessary in areas where the state already owns lands partially used. There is also under way a survey of available aerial maps within the state and a study of the advisability of a state-wide aerial survey.

The studies initiated or furthered embraced the water resources of the state, the more obvious problem of flood control being treated as only a part of the larger problem of the conservation of water resources and its effect on soil erosion, water supply, water power, stream pollution, navigation, recreation, reforestation and general land use. An intensive study of the Mohawk River Basin was begun, this test area being selected because of its high state of development and the wealth of technical data and general information available. From this study, the Council expects to demonstrate the value of coordinated effort and long-term planning.

In its recommendations, the Council places emphasis on the desirability of a better distribution of industrial and agricultural activities to spread the demand of labor; prompt adoption of programs for flood control, stream purification, the arrest of soil erosion, and the development of timber production. Legislation empowering state, county and local highway authorities to employ the principle of the "freeway" in the construction of new highways or the improvement of existing roads is advocated.

The "freeway" is a new type of highway in which the chief distinctive feature is that owners of abutting property have only a limited and regulated right of access to the right of way. The purpose is to facilitate traffic by avoiding frequent intersections and preventing the erection of buildings within a prescribed distance from the driving lanes.

Heavy Through Trucks Must Use Tuscarora St.

Trucks over six tons will be barred from Baldwin avenue and Steuben street, according to a resolution passed by the members of the Village Board meeting in session Monday night in the village hall. Suitable signs will be constructed and placed at the intersections of Baldwin avenue and state highway and Steuben street and state highway, warning truck drivers that they will penalized if caught on these streets with truck loads over six tons. Truck drivers steer clear of the curve and bridge in Tuscarora street.

The board members felt that with the coming of spring these streets would be terribly misused by these heavy trucks for frost, plus the weight of the trucks would destroy the surface. Considerable discussion took place over this issue.

Most of the night's session was given over to an audit of the books of the village collector. This was not an annual audit. It concerned itself mostly with taxes, due and paid.

The report of village treasurer Wilfred Miller showed that $14,174.-81 had been collected in taxes during the last fiscal period. A small percentage of this sum was collected for taxes due beyond the 1936 period, that is for periods in 1935 and before.

The total amount of unpaid taxes at the time the report was given is $1,337.13. Of this sum, about 10 per cent is for taxes in arrears of 1936, in other words for years prior to 1936. The amount of uncollected taxes at the present time is less by about $100 than last year at the same time.

Private Industry Absorbs 89 County Workers

The National Re-Employment Service in this county placed 89 in private industry during the month of November, according to a report of Lee Dennison, NRS manager for the county. In addition to those placed in private employment by the service, 95 were placed in governmental service and 119 in emergency work projects, making a total of 303 jobs given out during the period of the report.

OMITTED

The names of Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Williams, children, Gary and Suzanne and the Misses Margaret and Madge Miller of Hornell were inadvertently omitted from the list of Christmas dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reynolds. as published last week.

Burrell Vastbinder, former Addison postmaster, is spending a few days in town. On his return to Florida it is reported Burr will go the rounds of the major leagues training camps seeking likely material which may be drafted for the Addison baseball team.

Painted Post H.S. Trims Addison Knights 47 to 22 on Home Court

Locals Suffer Severe Trouncing at Hands of Walton and Company — Many Fouls Called on Both Squads—Losers Unable to Fathom Fast Passing Attack of Victors.

By Maynard B. Allen

The Painted Post Indians gave the Addison Knights a 47-22 trouncing Tuesday night in the Painted Post Auditorium. While the Posters had the invading Addison team on the defense most of the time they had to contend with the fastest scoring quintet Addison has shown this year.

This new combination puts Francis Heidrick and Perkins, Thompson and Hopper played center or forward; Orr and Gardner remain in the guard berths.

A total of 23 fouls were called making it the closest refereed game the Addison team has played. Two Knights, Orr and Thompson, left the game by the four-foul route. This handicapped the Addisonites who were already at a disadvantage in the matter of height as Thompson and Orr are their tallest men.

Walton was the spear point for the Posters collecting 18 points. "Fran" Heidrick cracked the Indian's defense to add 15 points to the Knight's score.

As the first quarter got under way Heidrick sank the first basket on an overhead shot. Grace retaliated with a double decker. Walton and K. Bills each converted a foul for the home team. Perkins sank a pop shot and did K. Bills and Grace of the Post. The quarter score being 8-4 in favor of the Indians.

Heidrick sank three baskets and a foul, the only Addison points gained in the second half. Meanwhile the Posters collected 11 points on three baskets by Walton, double reckers by Grace and James, and a foul by Jones. The half ended 19 to 11 for the Post.

The third quarter was a Post rally, Walton contributed two double deckers and two fouls, Smith sank a couple of pop shots, while Jones converted two fouls, to bring the score to 31-13 as Heidrick was the only Addisonite to raise the local score.

The final quarter proved the best for Addison. Heidrick opened it with a pop shot and Gardner followed suit with another. James converted a foul for the Post as did Perkins for Addison. Cornell sank a double decker. Snyder and Jones each broke through the Knight's defense to sink a cripple. Heidrick made a couple of free throws good. Walton found the hoop for a couple of points. Hopper planked his feet on the foul line and calmly put a couple of free throws through. The Posters rallied, Walton sank a side shot and a foul, Grace catching the spirit located the hoop twice in rapid succession.

The score:

During the summer months a resident of this neighborhood found a white faced hornets' nest as large as a 10 quart pail resting in a currant bush in the garden, not more than a foot from the ground. This is said to be contrary to their habits as they are always known to build their nests in a high tree and old timers say it is a sure sign there will not be any deep snow during this winter. Lets wait and see.

Father Walsh, Buffalo Churchman, Former Curtis Resident, Passes

The Rev. Robert E. Walsh, L. L. D., rector of St. Mark's Church in Buffalo, who organized St. Mary's parish in Batavia in 1906 and later supervised the construction of the present church, died Monday morning at the Buffalo rectory, No. 401 Woodward avenue, after a brief illness.

Father Walch was a native of Steuben County, having been born at Curtis, Feb. 12, 1868, the oldest of 12 children of Robert and Julia Walsh. He attended the Curtis school and Bath High School before entering college and was known to many people in this county.

Father Walsh was transferred to Batavia by the late Bishop Charles H. Colton after having reorganized the Holy Name of Mary parish at East Pembroke and attached missions of Crittenden, Corfu, Oakfield, and Wheatfield. He served the Batavia parish until 1915, when he was sent to St. Patrick's Church at Salamanca.

Before the present sandstone edifice on Ellicott street was completed, Father Walsh conducted services and said mass for a little over a year at a small chapel in the present rectory. Prior to the organization of the parish, the parishioners had attended St. Joseph's Church.

In 1928, the former Batavia priest became rector of the Buffalo church to succeed the Rt. Rev. John J. McMahon, D. D., who had been elevated to the head of the diocese of Trenton, N. J.

Father Walsh was graduated from St. Bonaventure's College at Olean in 1894 and was ordained to the priesthood March 5, 1893, in Buffalo by Bishop James E. Quigley, later archbishop of Chicago. On the following day he celebrated his first solemn high mass in St. Joseph's Church at Campbell and on the next day sang the funeral mass for his mother in the same church.

His first appointment was as assistant to Rt. Rev. Monsignor James Lannigan at St. Brigid's Church in Buffalo. He later served in a similar capacity at Immaculate Conception Church and the Cathedral chapel in Buffalo. Before going to East Pembroke he was administrator at Immaculate Conception parish in Wellsville.

Surviving are five sisters, Sister Roberta of the Sisters of St. Joeph's, Buffalo; Mary Walsh of Curtis, Julia Walsh of Buffalo, Margaret Walsh of New York and Mrs. Herbert McCaslin of Woodhull, and three brothers, Dr. Jeremiah H. Walsh, Chicago, William D. Walsh, Los Angeles, and John D. Walsh of Portland, Ore.

Burial will be in Corning.

BURMA produces nearly all the earth's rubies, most famous mines being at Magok, in Upper Burma, 90 miles from Mandalay as the crow doesn't fly. A true ruby is red, transparent, softer than sapphire.

Gems, as a rule, are found in gravels and surface deposits formed by parent-rock decomposition. A flawless pigeon-blood (Burma), weighing more than 1 carat, is generally worth many times a diamond of same weight.

In 1932 the port of Albany was widened, deepened and made a calling port for ocean - going freight and other vessels. Albany is the second freight transshipment center in the United States.

WHAT is a Will? A Will or Testament is merely a final disposition of an individual's property. The disposition is effective after his death. A will may be signed any day, Sundays and Holidays included. And who is competent to make a will? Anybody, except idiots, people of unsound mind and infants.

Interesting: The number of persons employed during the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago was 75,650, dividing a payroll of $10,529,431. Total attendance for the two seasons was 38,626,546.

According to the Department of Commerce, the estimated United States tourist expenditures aboard in 1933 were $292,000,000. Foreign visitors left $71,000,000 with us here. The peak year for American spending abroad was in 1929 when we dropped a mere $821,000,000 for this and that.

Do you know that families whose income is less than $2000 per year buy more than two-thirds of all goods we sell? Now who are America's real spenders?

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Gas Injury to Plants

J. M. Bickerton

Diseases caused by micro-organisms can kill house plants, but probably a more serious enemy to plants grown in the home is gas. Coal gas may come from improper burning of the coal in the furnace or heater, and illuminating gas may escape from the cooking range or from other outlets in the home.

Some plants are more susceptible to gas injury than are others, even to the extent that one part of gas to 40,000 parts of air may cause severe injuries. Plants such as the Boston fern and poinsettias are fairly susceptible, while cyclamens are very resistant.

With many plants the first symptom of gas injury is a sudden dropping of the leaves. With other plants, such as the rose, a yellowing of the leaves may also appear.

In many instances, browning may follow the yellowing. Another common symptom of gas injury on some plants is the dropping off of the leaves, buds, flowers and fruits. On plants that are very susceptible, foliage drops progressively from the oldest to the youngest leaves.

The remedy for gas injury is obvious. Get rid of the escaping gas. Give more attention to drafts on furnaces and on other heaters to insure better combustion of the coal. Check the gas range and other outlets for escaping illuminating gas. A final remedy, of course, is to grow plants that are not susceptible to gas injury.

Will Include Flower Seeds in Inspection

Beginning January 1, flower seeds offered for sale within New York State will be subject to the same control as now applies to field and vegetable seeds in a move to protect both the buyer and the reliable seedsman against unscrupulous dealers, says Prof. M. T. Munn in charge of the seed testing laboratory at the Experiment Station at Geneva in an article in the current issue of "Farm Research", the Station's quarterly magazine.

The ammendment to the seed law affecting flower seeds while not particularly drastic in itself, brings into operation far-reaching and effective regulations as part of the agricultural laws of the State as administered by the Department of Agriculture and Markets, explains Prof. Munn.

The statute requires, for example, that the vendor, whose name and address must appear on each packet, must state the kind and variety of flower seed he places in the packet. It stipulates that all statements made in advertising or on the packet must be truthful, providing penalties for misrepresentations. Full authority is given State officials to examine, analize, and test any flower seeds offered for sale and to remove from sale all lots found unfit for seeding purposes. Trial grounds for growing seeds to maturity to determine trueness to name are also authorized.

"It is confidently expected", concludes Prof. Munn, "that the flower seed law, like our other seed laws, will give ample protection to flower growers as well as to the many reliable flower seed growers and specialists who give much attention to flower breeding and who have invested considerable sums in facilities for growing many beautiful and excellent flowers."

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of information of the New York State college of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Heating the Home

Mrs. C. L. C. writes: "We are living in a very old house and find it impossible to heat three rooms with two stoves. The stoves are in the same chimney, with pipes on the stove six inches and openings to the chimney five inches.

"What is the required size of chimney for adequate draft for two stoves? Is there any particular height? We have many large trees around the house."

Professor B. B. Robb of the department of agricultural engineering answers: "I see no reason why you can not heat your three rooms with two stoves, provided the stoves are large enough.

"Unquestionably, your trouble is not enough draught in the chimney, which may be caused by one or more of the following reasons: chimney too low, stopped up, too small, or a leak in the chimney, meaning that it is cracked. Perhaps the trees cause the trouble.

"Chimneys that are built entirely within the house draw better than those built outside, because inside chimneys are warmer."

Poultry Lights

A poultryman inquires about the use of lights in the poultry house; whether they can be discontinued it once started in the fall; and if morning or evening lights are best.

Professor L. M. Hurd of the poultry department replies: "One thing to remember about using lights: once it is started in the fall, it must be continued regularly until about April 1. This rule has no exceptions. All-night light as well as other methods of lighting must be discontinued slowly when spring comes.

"Lights can be used in the morning, or in the evening, or both. All ways work well, but morning light is a little the best. Provide light during 12 to 14 hours each day. Some poultrymen prefer to have light all night.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

Wyandottes

Any variety of Wyandottes makes an excellent fowl for the backyard poultryman as well as for the farmer who wants a large flock. The breed is regarded by many as a meat breed but it is one of the American dual purpose fowls which has been bred for good egg production.

The eggs of this breed are varying shades of brown. The skin is rich yellow and the breasts are unusually round and plump making excellent roasting chickens. Being of medium weight this fowl is a good market fowl. They make excellent broilers.

The body is deep and stocky in appearance and is closely feathered enabling the Wyandottes to withstand severe weather without discomfort. The rose comb which curves with the shape of the head resists the zero weather eliminating trouble with frozen combs. Frozen combs impair fertility and lower egg production.

Wyandottes like other heavy breeds do not mature as rapidly as Leghorns. Unlike Leghorns they are good setters and mothers which appeals to the person who wishes to hatch some of the eggs with hens.

They are food foragers and very hardy. Their quiet disposition makes them easy to handle and good pets. A low fence will keep them out of the garden and flower beds.

No breed of poultry can beat a flock of Wyandottes for sheer beauty. The most common variety is the white Wyandottes but there are seven other varieties some in very striking color combinations. Other varieties in plain color are the Buff and the Black Wyandottes.

For the person who wishes all the basic qualities of this breed in a flock which will attract the attention and admiration of his friends there are the Columbian, the Silver-Laced, the Silver-Penciled, the Golden Lace and the Partridge Wyandottes. With proper care any one of these breeds will keep the family in eggs and furnish an occasional chicken dinner unexcelled by any other breed.

1937 License Plates Now On Sale

Albany, Jan. 2—With the passing of the holiday season, the Bureau of Motor Vehicles wishes to call attention to sale of 1937 license plates during the month of January.

The plates are now on sale at the central offices at Albany and New York and the district offices at Syracuse, Brooklyn, Buffalo and Utica. Likewise throughcut the state, county clerks act as the agent of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in the distribution of plates for the convenience of the public.

With the exception of omnibuses and dealers' cars the 1937 plates are not necessary until the first day of February, but those who wait until the last moment to buy them are subjected to unfavorable conditions. By securing them during the early part of the month, large crowds and delays can be avoided.

"This state has a problem second to none in the registrations of automobiles", said Charles A. Harnett recently, "During the year of 1935, the State of New York registered 42,000 more vehicles than were ever before registered in this or any other governmental subdivision in the world."

Since the establishment of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, the increase in registrations has risen rapidly. The first eleven months of 1936 show a gain of 131,378 registrations over the entire year of 1935.

The Rambler

The first American flag flown in battle was made from tattered garments. Three resourceful Pennsylvania young ladies were caught between Facist and Royal guns in Spain during this civil war. They took stock, and then sewed an American flag together from strips of their pajamas, making a red, white and blue flag. Flying this they marched to the American consulate and were saved without the landing of the Marines.

Dan Colbert told me a fish story Saturday which tops anything I have heard for this time of year. He said, "Lew Burrell, an experienced fisherman, caught 26 bullheads Thursday and the next day, New Year's day, hooked 26 more at Hickey's High Banks." Dan was right. How about some bullheads, Lew?

"Men and women do not suffer a breakdown from overwork but because they move in a rut", says a psychiatrist. And I'd like to disagree with His Phychiatric Majesty and point out to him that many of the world's famous breakdowns have been caused from too great an interest in too many things, too many complex things.

Some early New Year's Eve revelers stood on the opposite side of the street and tried their aim on the sidewalk on the east side of the street. Their ammunition was an empty bottle which broke on landing. "Good Shot", said one as theglass scattered over the lawn. Occupants of the house were awakened by the noise and think less of the identified young men for the deed.

By the Grace of God we are privileged to begin a new year. What we make of it, however, is our own responsibility. I'm not asking you to make or keep resolutions but I will ask you to keep in mind the four things which never, never return; the spoken word, the spent arrow, neglected opportunities and time.

—o—

This idea of parents, mother's especially, leaving babies in baby carriages or automobiles while they shop on these cold days, is beginning to get me down. I have preached on it before. Again during the past week, when it has been cold, I have seen children in carriages crying and shivering from the cold while mothers argued with a clerk or renewed acquaintance with a friend.

This idea of inviting the Mothers of senior high school students to take part in class activities and advise and counsel with the students on these activities, is a very good one in my humble estimation. Mothers have been through the mill" and can give advice, which a teacher could not give owing to being too close to the school.

I know in my own case, Mother used to say that when we were in high school she lived our schooling with us as we came home at noon and at night and told her our school troubles. After that we went our various ways and the family has never been as united since. I'm all for giving the Mothers as much a part in these activities as possible.

Ice formed on the river Wednesday morning for the second time this season. However, the coating was too thin for skating. Ordinarily at this time of year there would be ice thick enough to cut. I used to think that maybe I was changing as years roll over me but I'm convinced after this year that it's the weather that is changing.

I'm respectfully calling your attention to the poem on the front page. This was borrowed from an anonymous source but I feel it is well worth reading, not so much for the beauty of its poetry but the appeal of its message.

—o—

No, I did not celebrate New Year's Eve, altho I did hear the B. & O. whistle, the only loud noise to usher in the new year here. Anyway, I had a clear head Saturday morning. How about you?

—o—

Usually about this time most columnists have to ask you if you kept your New Year's resolutions. I'm not going to ask you. Personally I did not make any, for I found several years ago that most of the ones I made I did not keep. For the resolutions I really wanted to keep I did not need a New Year's resolution.

That's all.

Steuben Dairymen Study Modern Breeding Methods

To make progress in building up their herds, Steuben County dairymen must look for breeding stock backed by production records which indicate ability to transmit high production, according to J. D. Burke, authority on breeding from Cornell, who spoke at the cattle breeding school on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week at Addison.

Leading dairymen from all parts of the county attended the sessions, to learn what science has determined in this field, how the laws of inheritance operate in the breeding of dairy cattle, and how these principles can be used to breed a high producing herd.

The inheritance of milk and butterfat production was fully explained. It was emphasized that dairymen must look for breeding stock backed by production records which indicate ability to transmit high production of they are to make progress in building up their herds.

The dairymen were shown how it is that a cow may be a high producer herself and yet not transmit that production to her offspring. "It is only by the continued use of better bulls selected on the basis of what they can transmit to their daughters that the gamble can be taken out of breeding" said Mr. Burke.

"It is necessary to follow a system of continuous record keeping if the dairyman is to know what his cows and his herd sires are transmitting to their offspring. Only by testing all the daughters of a herd sire can his transmitting ability be accurately determined", the speaker said.

The very practical problems of selecting herd sires, how to keep them and how to prove them, were all explained. A method of exchanging bulls in order to reduce the cost of keeping a good bull at the head of the herd, and in order to prove such bulls, was also presented.

The meeting was a feature of the Better Sire Campaign, which is a major item of the dairy program of the Steuben County Farm Bureau.

So in the next war, we should at the outset go on a war footing in order to preserve neutrality. We should go on a war footing before the war hysteria broke out. We should go on a war footing before a war party is organized This is, I believe, the only prudent and effective way to remain neutral, at peace with ourselves, and reasonably sane.

SPORTS ON PARADE

LEW ANDREAS, Syracuse basketball coach, should have no difficulty in landing a berth on a mythical All-America Coaching Team . . . In twelve years, his teams have won 178 games and dropped but 37 to give him a percentage of .828. . . Vic Hanson, former football coach of the Orange, was captain of one of the best Syracuse quintets ever turned out by Andreas. . . That team rang up 19 victories to 1 defeat.

Elmira is the home of many a big league battery man. . . A few years ago there was Joe Genowitz pitching for the Giants. . . Now there's Bruce Ogrodowski catching for the Cards and Al Todd backstopping for the Pirates.

And speaking of Elmira, one day last Summer at an NYP league game, Wallie Pipgras was umpiring at first, Ed Rhomell was umpiring behind the plate, Rabbit Maranville was playing second for Elmira, and Red Murray, the old Giant outfielder, was in the stands. . . In their prime, all four would have packed any league park. . . Fame is fleeting, isn't it?

Now that Wes Ferrell, the Red Sox flinger, has been re-united with the $1,000 that was fined him by his manager, let's hope he'll be a good boy. . . Wes and his brother, Rick, by the way, form the most famous brother-battery in the game. . . There have been very few pitcher-catcher combinations in baseball's brother acts.

And considering the number of brothers playing ball today, there's no question that baseball talent runs in many a family. . . Look at the Deans, the Di Maggios and the Waners, for instance. . . And Bill Dickey has a brother, George, who will be a star catcher in a few years.

Negro athletes came into their own this year. . . And Brud Holland, Cornell's stellar end, did much to help the cause of his race along. . . A fine boy and a splendid player, he has joined Jesse Owens, Joe Louis, Archie Williams, Oze Simmons, Cornelius Johnson and Homer Harris in the group of those whose deeds have won them the respect of all men. . . Homer Harris, by the way, will captain next year's Iowa football team, the first man of his race to have that honor in Big Ten history.

Probably more vegetable growers had their soil tested for acidity in 1936 than in any pervious year, but there is still room for improvement. Every grower should know his soil and should not apply lime unless a soil test indicates it is needed.

Orr Ancestors Hold Annual New Year's Meet

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Orr entertained descendants of the Levi and Julia Wing Orr family at their home on South St., with a New Years dinner. Places being arranged for thirty-four.

This gathering was started New Year's Day 1868 after Julia, the eldest daughter married Henry Smith in 1867. They returned home each New Year's Day and as the other five children married they returned home likewise, establishing the custom which has never but once been broken throughout the many years, The one exception being caused by the death of Ellen Woodcook, a daughter.

This custom was continued until both parents had departed. It was then held at the homes of the six children, Julia Smith, Augustus Orr, Alice Gardner, Ellen Woodcook, Cora Williams and Amos Orr.

Mrs. Cora Williams is the only survivor of the first gathering. She was then a little girl of about seven years.

Those present at the latest gathering were: Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Williams, Mr. W. W. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Housel and children, Myrtle, Edward, Leland, Leonard, Robert and Shirley, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Ackerson and son Stanley, Mrs. Jessie Hovey and Richard Hovey of Addison, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Black, Mrs. Lou Wright Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Titus, son Ammon and daughter Ellen of Presho, Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Blackman, son Robert, Mrs. Elton Van Derhoff, son Richard, daughters Ursula and Kay, of Painted Post, Mrs. A. W. Orr, Lindley, Mrs. Stella Bottom, Elkland, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Orr.

GUESTS AT DINNER

Several Addison people were guests at a recent dinner party in Bath given by the Hon. and Mrs. Sterling W. Cole and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cole honoring the fortieth wedding anniversary of their parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Cole of Albany.

Addison guests were Judge and Mrs. E. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs S. M. La Grange, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Mac Dowell, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Goff and George Weatherly.

ROBERT HENRY TREMAN

Robert Henry Treman, one of Ithaca's outstanding men, died Monday at his home. His death came suddenly. Mr. Treman was well known as a benefactor to the people of the State of New York by virtue of his gifts of land for state parks, including Enfield and Buttermilk State Parks, Taughannock Falls Tuberculosis Hospital, Treman Park and Lake, and Treman Triangle at the entrance to Cascadilla Gorge.

He had been a director of the Federal Reserve Bank, vice president of the New York State Park Council, member of the Finger Lakes Commission, trustee of Cornell University and one of its most active and prominent alumnus, and other civic, fraternal, educational and recreational groups.

The Men's Club of St. Catherine's Church will meet Thursday night in the church parlors. There will be a program of music, entertainment and refreshments. Members of the CCC Camp will entertain with music and songs.

Parents Invited to Hear High School Speaker Fri.

E. C. Humphrey of Rochester Business Institute, and a speaker of ability, will address the students in Addison High School Friday morning at 8:45 o'clock in the assembly hall.

He will speak on "Peculiar People". The parents of school students, friends and others interested in the speaker, talk or students, are invited to attend.

Seats will be provided in the rear of the assembly hall for guests. The talk will last about 30 minutes.

Canisteo Invades Addison High Here Friday

Friday evening will see the Canisteo High School Teams invade the Addison school for the opening game of the Class B league season. Canisteo has practically the same team that nosed last year's Knights out by a narrow margin. This year the Canisteo lads have sprung a couple of suprise victories in non-league games.

Canisteo and Addison are the two Class A teams who forfeited all rights to represent Steuben County in the Sectionals to make the Class B League larger as it only consisted of two teams, Hammondsport and Avoca.

Since the Christmas vacation the Knights have come back to practice showing some of the fight they had in the first games of the season but lacked in the Elkland game. Coach Hewson is confident they will give their up-river rivals a tough fight.

In the preliminary the Canisteo girls will play the Addison lassies. All who have seen games between these teams know there is bound to be fireworks.

With Space, Burlingame and Beers, veterans of several clashes between these two scrappy girl sextets Addison will be sure to furnish its share of the action.

CCC Activities

The educational program in the Addison CCC Camp is back to normal this week. The holiday leaves cut down the attendance considerably. But with the resumption of a full-time schedule things are again humming around Camp. The burning of the administration building will not slow up the educational program. Until the 5th barrack is ready to be used as a school building the Rec Hall will continue to be used as a school and for recreational purposes.

The Catholic Church of Addison is sponsoring a party for all the fellows in Camp tonight (Thursday) in the basement of the Church. The program committee consisting of Father Moffett, Mr. Vona and Mr. Rose have plans for boxing, games, and refreshments. From all indications it should be an evening of fun for all.

Lenox Fay who was home on a sixteen-day furlough was called back to the Naval Training Station at Newport, R. I., in readiness to leave for the Trade School at San Diego, January 7.

Mothers Asked To Aid Senior Class Activities

Mothers of students in the Senior Class of the Addison High School are to be invited to attend a meeting in the high school Tuesday afternoon after school. The object of the meeting is to submit plans to the mothers relative to raising funds for senior class activities. Also to seek their support for these activities and in the fund raising plans necessary to carry out the class objectives.

Several class activities will be non-supporting and with this idea in mind class officers and school authorities are promoting activities to raise class funds. Among the events which the parents will be asked to pass upon are; two card parties during February and March, two suppers and a movie benefit in the local theatre.

Miss Alice J. Bailey is faculty advisor to the class and is in general charge of the Tuesday program. Robert Dykins, president of the class will welcome the mothers and short talks will be given by Miss Bailey and Irving Gladtone, principal.

At this time an organization will be affected among the mothers with chairmen for the various activities, if the mothers vote the events should be scheduled. Committee appointments will also be made and plans for the entire year's activities be discussed.

The meeting will be held in room 15 at 3:50 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Ten days have passed since the kidnapping of little Charles Mattson, son of the Tacoma, Wash. doctor and still the lad has not been brought back.
